for Desertion.

Alleging that since Justice Giegerich's order limiting her alimony to $7 a week and allowing her $50 counsel fee in her suit for a separation, she has discovered that her husband, Frank M. Apple baum, manager of Moe Levy & Co. has an affinity living in luxury, Mrs. Rose Appelbaum applied to Justice Mc-Call in the Supreme Court to-day. She demanded an increase of alimony to So a week and 1200 more for her law yer, John C. Judge, of Brocklyn.

Israel H. Perskin, a clerk in Mr. Judge's office, testified that he called at No. 118 West One Hundred and Twelfth street Sept. 17 aand learned that "Mr. and Mrs. Frank M. Appel" lived on the third floor. Knocking at the door of this flat, Mr. Perskin says, a woman, who said she was "Mrs. Appel," opened it and declared she was married to "Mr. Appel."

"Yes, I know he is a married man stand left his wife and child," she is all leged to have said. I am awful sorry, but if I didn't live with him some other woman would."

Against the allegations in his wife's complaint that her husband deserted his fifth the said of the marriage and when her baby, Ray, was only four months old, in 1901, and for two years failed to contribute to her support. Invid Geenberg presented an affidavit signed "Frank M. Appel."

Mr. Greenberg said that an order signed by Justice Hendrick changed the name of Frank M. Appelbaum to "Appel" from Sept. 25. It came out in the course of the argument that Rose Cohen was the St. Louis sister of Moe Lavy's manager's first wife, and that the sorrowing widower with a two-year-old son, proposed to his aunt Rose on the long distance telephone, was accepted, and the two were married by telephone, the deceased wife's sister coming on to New York to take her place at the head of the Appelbaum table in August, 1899.

"It is true that for two years I sent her nothing," Appel admitted, "but I had gone to Otina, where I was stranded."

FROM COURT TO

Girl's Scream at Fear Her Wooer Was Leaving Was Cause of Arrest.

Fourteen-year-old Helen Endres, with a wealth of blonde hair and big blue eyes dimmed by hours of crying, appeared in the Morrisania Police Cour o-day against Henry Losche, a milk dealer, charging him with attacking Hundred and Forty-fifth street, The case had not progressed far when became evident that both were unwilling to allow the law to break in on room to the German Lutheran Church, four blocks away, where they were A year ago Endres's wife died and he and his only daughter went to live at the One Hundred and Forty-fifth street address. Losche, handsome and twen ry-one years old, occupied an apartment Lest night Losche and the girl were alone on the back porch. Her father was reading in his room when he heard a scream. He found his daughter crying in the hall and, thinking Lescae had afacked her, had him ariested.

"Oh, Judge, I only screamed becaus I though: Henry was going to leave me." she explained.

Losche walked straight up to Magistrate Wahle. He spid:

"Why, Judge, what's the use of going on with this thing? I love this little girl and have loved her ever since I irst saw her"

"I love Henry, too, Judge," broke in fair Helen.

"Why, I'll marry Helen on the spot If hier father will give his consent."

"The father said: "Then, turning to the prent he said: "Henry asway?"

The father said: "Yes." and Henry and Helen rushed into an embrace, and a burst of hand-clapping from the rear of the court-room followed. Both turned to thank the Magistrate and, just to show him and the curlous throng that the affair was sincere. Henry kissed his sweetheart as he left the rail.

The wedding followd and a dinner was given downtown. Mr. Endres says he will put his new son-in-law in business and will live with the couple.
